Steven Celentano has been working as a physical education teacher for the last thirteen plus years. He graduated William Paterson University in 2010 with a certification in Physical Education, Health and Drivers Ed. He spent twelve years teaching adaptive physical education and the last two years coordinating transition services for the students and their families at the Gramon Family of Schools. He is currently working at Radcliffe Elementary as the physical education teacher. He also coaches travel ice hockey through the Ice House in Hackensack, NJ and has been coaching the sport for over fifteen years. He believes in equal and fair play for everyone and most importantly providing a safe environment for everyone to learn and grow.

This program is designed to provide varying levels of cognitive and physical activity. All sessions are designed for learners of all abilities and diagnoses. This will include obstacle courses and varying physical education activities. It is designed to provide a safe environment for physical play.
